lews of Southern Union Men upon th War and the Regro Question. The following letter from an intelligent offieer in our army at New Orleans, (one of our fellow townsmen.) will be found important and Interesting in its statements:

New Oslana, Sept. 16, 1862.

My Dear Whig and Courier:

I could not belp thinking, as I was talking last night with one of the most prominent of the Union men in this city, that it would be a fine thing if some of our Northern friends, who are so very sensitive about the rights of a people who are doing their utmost to subuyate them, could only hear and know the expressions and belief of the true men, "faithful found among the faithless," and see how their patriotism outrans any of the prejudices of the hour. These men know, because they are made to feel the terrible carnesaness of the leaders in rebellion, and the means which they make use of to put down any opposition.

You spoke of negroes, Mr. F., and I should like to bear what you think of arming them—everty conversation about the present state of

LETTER PROM NEW ORLEANS

You spoke of negroes, Mr. F., and I should like to hear what you think of arming themevery conversation about the present state of affairs turns on the negro.

Yes! says he, it is like the maelstrom. But before I answer this, let me settle one or two errors into which you of the North have fallen, and nothing to be wondered at either, as you have had the changes rung on them so much and so often. You have often heard, "Well, what is to become of your rice and your cotton? No white man can work here!" Now, that is a lie! Let me give you my experience, which extends over a twenty years' experience in this city, and which is supported by figures from the consus returns. New Orleans is nearly the most southern part of the United States—only a portion of Texas and the Pennsula of Florida more southern—surrounded by marshes and fens, situated below the surface of the river, and subject to an almost annual epidemic, to which, on account of some difference in organization, the negro race is almost entirely exempt—all this making it one of the most trying places for a white man to labor in. Now, if he can work here, he can work anywhere else in our land! During the hottest weather I have seen thousands of white men laboring on the Levee, you know, is "hotter than Tophet."

Il readily assented to this, for at noon of one sweltering day in August I saw and noted the laborers, employed by order of General Battler, busy at work, without any inconvenience, apparently, on the Levee]

This, they said, was not a fair test. White busy at work, without any inconvenience, apparently, on the Levee]

This, they said, was not a fair test. White men may answer to do the work in the city, but they never can riand farm work—they must sink under it. When I first came here all the produce raised for the market was by negro listor; and nothing can be more trying to the constitution than gardening. I how assentingly. Let us turn to the census reports. In 1840 there were, say, 130,600 lahabitants and 11,000 slaves.

there were, say, 130,600 inhabitants and 11,000 slaves.

In 1850, sky 145,000 inhabitants and still 11,000 slaves.

In 1860, say 175,000 inhabitants and still 11,000 slaves.

Not enough slaves for horsework, and New Orleans the greatest slave mart in Christendom. Now, who does the work? The white many and not one kind of work only, but all, supported that.

man; and not one kind of work only, but all, everything.

Another thing, "nearoes free will not labor." In this city there are 175,000 inhabitants; subtracting 11,000 slaves and 15,000 free colored we shall have 149,000 whites.

The whole taxable property is $121,000,000. How much of that belongs to the free blacks." Fifteen millions of dollars to lifteen thousand blacks, which if divided would give one thousand dollars to a man. Remember, too, they have not the same chance as the white man—have not the same chance as the white ma none of the professions are open to them, and though they are taxed to support our schools, their children cannot be sent there. They have to entirely support schools for the education children.

Now substruct the fitteen millions from their children.

Now substruct the filtren militons and you have one hundred and twenty-four militons and you have one hundred and nitre militons to be divided among one hundred and hite militons to be divided among one hundred and torty mine thousand in habitants. Is not the difference surprising: Why, "he who runs can read"

In regard to arming the newro, I am in favor of it. They will make good, hardy soldiers. Secessionists say, raising their hunsis in holy horror, "why, they are going to arm the nigger." Well, what of it. This is rar, and or part of the country must conquer, the other he conquered, and perhaps its people exterminated. Now, yet are prelig present to read a lesson to me on the Constitution which you are deligy our timest to trear down. The season to me on the Constitution which you are deligy our timest to trear down. The season to me on the Constitution which you are deligy our timest to trear down. The season to find the country and the results of the country And to the wickedness is added folly when by belping ourselves we can overturn a sin, and, a "bone of contention" cramble to owder. It has seemed to me, Mr. F. says I for though an attentive listener I don't like to remain si-lect all the time; it seems to me that the very best way to show the slave that liberty is not license, in to make a saldier of him. He will feel bimself under strict law and stern discip-line—at the same time he is a free man, and b feel himself under strict law and stern disciptine—at the same time he is a free man, and he will naturally conclude that men are bound by laws, though not bond-men. He will see white soldiers, too, under the same strict regulations, which will, at the same time, strengthen his former conclusion, make him acquiesce in the wisdom of it and give him ambition. The colored soldiers who march past here daily, do winderfully well. They have their hearts in it and I believe will fight bravely.

All experience goes to prove, said Mr. F., who had borne my interruption rather impatiently, that negro soldiers will fight. I agree with Mr. S. here, who replies to his secession friends: "Either negroes will fight or they won't fight, and it they will fight, I go in for giving them a chance."

But slavery indead! dead!! dead!! Yes, the great immigration which will take place into this Southern country at the end of the war will kill it. For I believe there will be a nuprecedented flow of good, honest, industrious precedented flow of good, honest, industriou citizens. You will have all the trades and a the arts, the inborer, the farmer, the mechanic and your society will be atterly changed "I hope what you say will prove true." Mr. F., "and I believe the same myself, b lecture I had no idea it was so late

Gen. Negley's Official Report of the Battle at Lavergue The following is Gen. Negley's official report f the late victory at Lavergue, Tenn HEAPQUARTERS UNITED STATES FORCES.

NASHVILLE, October !

San: Major General J. R. Anderson, Briga-dier General Forrest and General Harris have been rapidly concentrating a large rebet force at Lavergue, fifteen miles east, with the avowed intention of assaulting Nashville. Deeming it a favorable opportunity to check this project by a rudden blow, a concerted movement was de on the night of the 6th instant, by a farco made on the night of the Ghi instant, system of four, hundred infantry and four hundred infantry and four pieces of artifler, under command of Gen. considerable force on the roads, and skirmished with our advance ten miles, enabling the main force, consisting of one regiment, the Thirty-second Alabama infantry, with one steel rided cannon, and three thomsand cavairy, to assume a position, forming their lines in anticipation of our entire force advancing on the Murfrees-bore' road, which was part of our object. The enemy commenced the action by opening fire with three pieces of artillery, at a distance of three hundred yards. This was soon silenced by a shell from one of our guas exploding their ammunition chest, at the moment the enemy were directing their movements against the right flank of Gen. Palmer's force.

Col. Willis' infantry arrived, advancing to splendid line of battle, delivering a well directed fire into the enemy's ranks, which was followed by a skillful deployment of the right and left, to cut off their retrest. The Confederates held their ground for thirty minutes, and then ded in the wildest disorder, leaving one hundred and seventy-five prisoners in our bands, among whom were two lieutenants, two lieutemant colonels, and a number of line officers; three pieces of artillery, ordnance and quartermaster's stores, a large amount of provisithree pieces of artillery, ordnance and quar-termaster's stores, a large amount of provis
